Jim —

These are pretty rough sketches without much detail, but perhaps they will show you what I have in mind. The first one (Model A, as I've called it) is the one we discussed when you were here. The Model B box is a more recent idea. It has a nice closure, but the large amount of overhang may prove objectionable.

As you know, the bugaboo here is obtaining a design which is compatible with the allowable unit cost and the total anticipated number of boxes to be made. I have talked with one contractor who thinks the cost allowance will permit us to use stampings, but I think they may be a bit optimistic on this point. In any event, it appears that we are pretty much limited to painted steel when it comes to materials.

If you have any comments or criticisms on these proposed designs, please give me a call.

Howie
